

Deli's Hunger

Deli loved to eat and she always seemed to be hungry. One day when she could not find anything she liked at home, she decided to go out to find food. She had just left her burrow when she saw _____ (noun).

I wonder how that would taste she asked herself?

She licked it but did not like it, so she scurried on.

Deli saw a _____ (noun) and decided to try that. She took a bite and immediately _____ (verb – past tense).

Nope! Deli definitely did not want that.

Deli decided it was time to stop experimenting and find _____ (food-plural) to eat. She wondered where to go though. She looked in _____ (a place) and found _____ (noun-plural) but that did not appeal to her.

At last, she found a/an _____ (food). Unfortunately, it belonged to a _____ (animal). When she tried to snatch it, she realized she might end up being his dinner, so she rushed off. Deli determined her best bet after all was to go back home where it was safe, and she would just eat whatever she could find there. She was getting _____ (adverb) tired anyway.

On her way home, Deli encountered _____ (number) raccoons eating.

“Nice masks you are wearing,” she told them, “and I see you are washing your hands. You will stay safe from _____ (condition).”

Deli dashed for home as her _____ (adjective) tummy growled at her.
